The Blue Room by YANG Shaobin at the ARKEN Museum of Modern Art in Danemark

Ishøj (Denmark), 25 June 2013, Art Media Agency (AMA).

From 22 June to 22 September 2013, the ARKEN Museum of Modern Art in Denmark is presenting an exhibition titled “Blue Room” with works by Yang Shaobin.

After the United Nations’ conference on climate changes in 2009 in Copenhagen, which was called the “Copenhagen Summit,” the artist gathered all the press clippings presenting the stories of people seriously affected by pollution or natural disasters. This research work was transformed into a juxtaposition of portraits depicting the confrontation between helpless people and the forces of nature. The images are kinds of reality reminders and push viewers into reflection.

The artist explained that “Blue Room is more than just the title of this exhibition. It also describes the atmosphere within the exhibition hall, and encompasses the plight of all living things in nature.” The exhibition was already on display in 2010 at the Ullens Center for Contemporary Art in Beijing. It is the first time that it is shown outside China.
